The license key for the FileMaker Server software is limited to 35 characters. If you try to enter or view the license key, a dialog box will appear with the following message: Warning: The file 'license.inp' is saved as a 'license.zip' file and may be over 35 characters. Your license is now invalid. Are you sure you want to change your license key? If you want to change it, click Continue. If you do not want to change it, click Cancel and then review your license agreement to make sure you understand what to do next. Q: Converting a simple JSON response to Javascript Object I'm writing a very simple JavaScript application and I get the JSON response, I've converted that to a JavaScript Object using JSON.parse(); but when I console.log the object I still get a string. My question is how can I access some of the elements of this response? For example, I want to access the Items[0].Name; function load() { var jsonResponse; $.ajax({ type: 'get', url: '', success: function(data) { jsonResponse = JSON.parse(data); console.log(jsonResponse); //items.js = jsonResponse; console.log(items.js); } }); } A: if you want items to be an Object (as it states in the JSON response), you could do this: console.log(items) but if you want it to be an array, console.log(items.length) Cancer burden attributable to tobacco smoking in the Czech Republic based on the extrapolation of smoking-attributable deaths. Cancer attributable to smoking (CS-AP) in the Czech Republic is not well established. This study aimed to develop CS-AP estimates by extrapolation of known CS-AP by country, sex and age group using the Country-attributable fractions (CAFs) approach. CS-AP was calculated by the extrapolation of smoking-attributable deaths (SAMs) using the CAFs of 35 cancer sites and countries. Empirical Bayes CA
