All of the solutions I have found to this problem require at least two different cols, or to have one div take up 100% of the col, and the other two to set as display: table-cell. Neither of these solutions work here, and this one seems to require absolute positioning instead, which would be a nightmare to debug. Here is a visual example, showing what I am attempting. Is there a way to force this all to stack up vertically while keeping it all with the same width? I am building a UI for a tablet, so non-tablet styles don't work here. A: You can do this using the display: flex property. Sample Fiddle .wrapper{ width: 100%; display: flex; flex-direction: column; } .div1 { background: #000; } .div2 { background: #33f; } .div3 { background: #000; } For more information on display: flex see MDN on MDN 0 . 2 3 8 8 8 7 t o 2 d p s . 0 . 2 4 W h a t i s - 2 7 3 . 2

Without .Nucleoside triphosphate pyrophosphatases that appear to show specificity for pyrimidines are present in Escherichia coli. The patterns of labeling of Escherichia coli phosphocellulose chromatography plates with radioactive pyrimidine nucleoside triphosphates and deoxynucleoside diphosphates indicate that both E. coli single-stranded DNA- and single-stranded RNA-binding proteins contain nucleoside triphosphatases and nucleoside diphosphatases specific for pyrimidine nucleosides. Ribonuclease H, which hydrolyzes pyrimidine nucleoside triphosphate substrates, is present in these fractions. The nucleoside triphosphatase activities are not present in fractions with strong RNA-binding activities, while the diphosphatase activities are not present in fractions with strong DNA-binding activities.

VSU Reeling Under “Severe” Sandy The Georgia Gulf Energy Alliance (GGEA), the voice for the shrimping industry in Georgia, was briefed Thursday afternoon by the Southeast Region of the U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) regarding the conditions of the submerged lands off the coast of Southern Georgia. “It’s bad,” said a GGEA spokesperson after the briefing, estimating the damage to Georgia’s shrimp industry by Sandy to be “severe.” The ominous warning was provided to the GGEA at the conclusion of a three-day assessment of damaged shrimp stocks conducted by University of Georgia’s Coastal and Marine Lab (CMU) in collaboration with Southeastern University’s Coastal Waters Institute.
